1 According to the definition in the Law of Punishment (Clause 144A), racism means "persecuting, humiliating, disgracing, expressing animosity, hostility, or violence, or inciting confrontation and an environment of teaching, study and research, free of bias and discrimination, without differentiation by reason of religion, race and gender".

2. Complaints and guidance:

   The University strives to create a culture of equality and diversity, equality, acceptance, and safety for all, and works to provide a teaching, study and research environment that is free from discrimination, without differentiation by reason of religion, race, origin, nationality, sexual orientation, gender identity, ethnic identity, or disability.

   The University will employ all means at its disposal whenever these principles are violated.

3. Principles:

   1. Commitment to preserving freedom of expression: We, members of the TAU community, strive to nourish and preserve an environment in which opinion can be expressed and disputes can be conducted through respectful dialogue, avoiding any offense, harassment, or incitement on the basis of gender, religion, race, simple national origin, national orientation, identity, after identity, disability, opinion, or worldview. We are committed to protecting every person's freedom of expression, as a means to self-sufficiency, free in-depth investigation of ideas, queries and issues, and the preservation of domestic environment. We believe that plurality and diversity of opinion, inclusivity, empathy, and potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community.

   2. Commitment to preserving human dignity: All expression, even on controversial issues, highly charged matters, or topics that may provoke outrage, exasperation, or potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community. Exchange of opinions and open dialogue, involving tolerance for different viewpoints and diversity of opinion, including irritating, exasperating, and potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community. We believe that plurality and diversity of opinion, inclusivity, empathy, and potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community.

TAU Code of Conduct on Free Expression and Human Dignity
TEL AVIV UNIVERSITY

PRINCIPLES

1. Commitment to preserving freedom of expression: We, members of the TAU community, strive to nourish and preserve an environment in which opinion can be expressed and disputes can be conducted through respectful dialogue, avoiding any offense, harassment, or incitement on the basis of gender, religion, race, simple national origin, national orientation, identity, after identity, disability, opinion, or worldview. We are committed to protecting every person’s freedom of expression, as a means to self-sufficiency, free in-depth investigation of ideas, queries and issues, and the preservation of domestic environment. We believe that plurality and diversity of opinion, inclusivity, empathy, and potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community. Exchange of opinions and open dialogue, involving tolerance for different viewpoints and opinion, are core principles of any activity in the academic environment. Preserving them will ensure that universities continue to serve as fertile ground for the development and growth of innovative ideas, knowledge, and thought, coupled with open and respectful dialogue.

2. Commitment to preserving human dignity: All expression, even on controversial issues, highly charged matters, or topics that may provoke outrage, exasperation, or potentially offensive opinions, are essential for the growth and development of our academic community. Exchange of opinions and open dialogue, involving tolerance for different viewpoints and diversity of opinion, are core principles of any activity in the academic environment. Preserving them will ensure that universities continue to serve as fertile ground for the development and growth of innovative ideas, knowledge, and thought, coupled with open and respectful dialogue.

3. Complaints and guidance: If you believe that a person’s dignity or freedom of expression have been violated, or if you wish to seek advice on such matters, please contact diversity@tauex.tau.ac.il and your message will be passed on to an authorized party.